Course Overview

Narcotic trafficking has become more lucrative and complex, and law enforcement agencies are under pressure to reduce drug activity in their communities. This course is an introduction to officers new to drug investigations as well as a refresher for those who want to become familiar with current trends. It provides a foundation of investigative techniques from which officers can safely and ethically conduct drug investigations.

The course includes the identification of current illicit street drugs, common terms, and the Uniformed Controlled Substance Act, as well as local and national trends. Students will receive information on topics such as informant handling, consent searches, operations planning, and controlled buys. Officers will be instructed on the importance of accurate and ethical documentation, testimony and evidence presentation for successful prosecutions. The course will culminate with a hands-on practical exercise.

Students are required to attend all 5-days to receive the full 40-hours credit.
